WHIFFLETREE DELEGATION DUE TONIGHT

Rev. Hezekiah Spriggins Will Also Arrive.

MANY NOTABLES.

Rumor Mayor Martin Will Present Address of Welcome.

To-night will be a gala one for the students of the Faculty of Law, when the entire student body will turn out to give a rousing reception to Hank Whiffletree and the boys from Sim's Corners who will arrive at the Windsor Station at 8.30 p.m. to attend the Mock Parliament.

St. Whiffletree, the well-known and justly famous student of '21 Laws will lead the parade, which forms up at the Law Building, on University Street, at 5.00 o'clock. St. wishes to make it known through the medium of the "Daily" that he will take it as a personal favor if all students of the McGill, who can conveniently do so, will turn out to welcome his father.

Word has been received that the members of the Sim's Corners delegation have several important bills to put before the House of local and national import. Accompanying the delegation will be no less a personage than the Rev. Hezekiah Spriggins, the Sim's Corners Parson. Mr. Spriggins is a graduate of the Faculty of Theology of McGill, and no doubt will be tendered a private reception later by the Theologues.

Considerable excitement prevailed amongst the Law students when it became known that the Honorable Algernon Percival Pye-Smith would not only be present in the House to support the Agriculturalist, but would actually march to the station with his fellow-students to give three huzzas and a hip, hip hooray for the father of his bosom friend, St. The presence of the distinguished Oxonian will add tone to the whole affair.

An invitation has been extended by St. Whiffletree to Miss Priscilla Spunkhurst, the noted R.V.C. leader of the Feminist Movement, to sit with the Farmers' Delegation, but it is extremely doubtful whether she will accept, as she is an individualist from first to last, and her pronounced views would, in all probability, conflict with those of the Sim's Corners, who, as one man, believe that woman's place is by the old fire-side, knitting socks and the like.

It is rumored that Mayor Martin will present the address of welcome to Hank Whiffletree, but up to the time of going to press, this rumor had not been confirmed.

Special Wire to the "McGill Daily," 8.00 a.m.

"His Worship Mayor Martin will, it is now officially announced, be on hand at the meeting of the Mock Parliament to-night to officially welcome Mr. Hank Whiffletree and the Sim's Corners delegation."

All up, Boys! Hear the rousing address by His Worship the Mayor.

All students of the University will meet at the Law Building, 746 University Street, at 8.00 p.m. SHARP. The procession to Windsor Station will then start out to meet and escort the delegates to the Parliament Buildings of Old McGill. R.V.C. students will not be refused a place in the line.

DISCUSSION OF CANADIAN LABOUR NEAR

Big Meeting Of Year For Economists.

CHAIR. DR. LEACOCK.

Mr. M. J. Raphael Will Give A Talk on Organized Labor.

On Wednesday night, March 3rd, at Strathcona Hall, the most important meeting of the Political Economy Club will be held. Mr. M. J. Raphael will give a talk on "Organized Labor in Canada," after which there will be an open discussion.

Many prominent graduates and others interested in the subject have been invited to attend, who will, without doubt, state their views on the subject and tend to make the discussion of a lively nature. Everyone at all interested is given a cordial invitation to this one and only open meeting of the club.

Besides the graduates an invitation has been extended to the members of the Royal Victoria College, of whom many have signified their intention of attending.

Prof. Leacock has consented to take the chair at the meeting which will commence at 8 p.m. sharp. No admission will be charged and everyone will be given an opportunity of airing his views. It is an event of interest to all, so keep the date open.

GERMANY'S CATS STRANGELY GONE.

Germany lacks cats, and as a result rats and mice are swarming everywhere. At one time feline pets were as plentiful in the fatherland as in any other country, but during the war the whole tribe disappeared.

It is believed that the German butchers could explain this mystery, because it was noticed that their stores were usually well supplied with "rabbits" while cats were growing scarcer and scarcer. A cat is the most acceptable gift to a frau or fraulein to-day, and when any of the allied soldiers quartered on the Rhine go home on leave they are entreated to bring a good mouser back with them.

have any inclination at all towards gymnastic work.

The men assembled on the small gymnasium floor at 4 o'clock and immediately started work on the different pieces of apparatus.

The standard on the whole was very good yet no freshman need fear to compete. The different movements as stated in a previous issue of the "Daily" are not, on the whole, at all hard, and were very creditably performed.

Among those present were: Ross, Ross, Usher, Bishop, Holland, Hastings, Hamilton, Dellahaye, Scott, Vellosis and Daffoley.

The next practice will be on Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Central Y.M.C.A.

GEDDES SENDS RESIGNATION TO GOVERNORS

Has Been Appointed British Ambassador To U.S.

McGILL REGRETS.

Committee Will Consider Question Of Principalship.

The resignation of Sir Auckland Geddes was received at a special meeting of the Board of Governors yesterday morning. Sir Auckland stated that he had received the position of British Ambassador at Washington, and he requested that his resignation as principal be accepted. The Board complied with his request, and at the same time passed a resolution of regret at his inability to continue as principal of McGill. The Board also appointed a committee to consider the principalship question.

The success of Sir Auckland Geddes as British Ambassador to the United States is forecasted by both London and Washington. The American State Department has notified the British Government that his appointment would be thoroughly agreeable.

The London Observer says: "His work in organizing the national service will always hold a high place in the nation's war record. The present trade figures speak better than words for his ability at the Board of Trade. He lacks the gift of parliamentary management, but Washington requires very different gifts, and he has them. His public addresses are masterly, and in more personal intercourse, the one thing upon which the results of his mission will depend, he has the rare power of conviction, sympathy and respect. Those who know him most, trust him most, and like him most. Nothing better can be said of any man."

COMMERCIAL MEN VISIT LIBRARY

The Junior Commercial students, conducted by Prof. Latham, enjoyed a very instructive and pleasant visit to the Redpath Library yesterday morning. This visit was the result of a lecture delivered by Prof. Latham on the use of the library for obtaining information on any subject.

The students were first shown the large files on the balcony. These files contain copies of the index cards in the Congressional Library, Washington. In the Congressional Library are placed a copy of all books copyrighted in the United States and England. Thus, in order to know what books are written on the particular subject in hand, one has only to look up the files in the Redpath Library.

Prof. Latham next conducted the students through the large room, or rather house, of shelves and books. Here the students, starting from the top flight, gradually inspected the numerous books which were indicated by Prof. Latham. The students were shown the volumes of periodicals which were published as far back as 1800. When they reached the ground floor the students were shown where the index volumes on the periodicals were placed.

This interesting inspection of the Redpath Library then came to an end, and all of the students expressed themselves much impressed by the vast amount of books shown. All went away determined to use the library more freely, and with much better knowledge of what it contained.

N'FLD. MEETING HELD AT HALL

Skating Party To Be Held On March 11.

The Newfoundland Club held a business meeting last night at the Hall. A report on the last social event was given, followed by a statement from the treasurer of the club's financial standing.

After a few minor business matters had been dealt with, a discussion took place as to the nature of the final social function for the season.

It was decided to hold a skating party on the night of Thursday, March 11th, and to leave the arrangements in the hands of the executive.

TUESDAY, MARCH 2, 1920.

McGill Is Without A Pilot

The announcement by the Board of Governors yesterday that Sir Auckland Geddes, who for the past year has been nominally principal of McGill, has tendered his resignation will not create a great deal of surprise in University circles. In fact this has been awaited for some time by most of us, and for a long while by a few. McGill has lost a brilliant man and one who is, better than anyone whom we can think of at the present, fitted to carry the burden imposed upon her principal and to lead her in the drive which she must make towards greater success.

We are reminded of events which transpired about a year ago. April 4th, 1919, was McGill day in London. To herald the inauguration of the principalship of Sir Auckland Geddes, Mr. W. M. Birks of this city gathered around him at the Carlton Hotel a noteworthy company of Englishmen and Canadians, including Lord Milner, Sir Robert Borden, Bonar Law, the late Sir Wm. Osler and others. In proposing the toast of the evening "The McGill University and its New Principal" Mr. Bonar Law admitted that both he and the British Premier had tried hard to convince Sir Auckland that his greatest opportunities for usefulness and his duty lay rather in England than in Canada.

In replying to the toast Sir Auckland Geddes definitely pointed out why he had put aside high political ambition to accept this Canadian principalship. These were his words:

"I do not believe at the present moment, and in this I ask leave to differ from my right honorable friend, that anything in this country, not even in the Government, is of greater importance if we take a long view, than the work of education in Canada. If I did not believe it to be of greater importance than the work I was doing or was likely to do here, I would, in spite of my inclination, have refused the offer of the principalship of McGill.

"There is no factor more important for the future peace of the world than the development of good and cordial relations between the two great English-speaking peoples of the United States and the British Empire. Canada is the key to that position, and Canadian universities because of their control over the flexible mind of youth hold that key, and of all these universities McGill, because of its history and geographical position, is bound to be the most important. So I am glad to go to the very spot of all others which I believe to be the most important at the present time. In a short time I hope to be sailing back to Montreal to take up my work at my old University. Changes there will be in the University. Growth there must be. This is a time of reconstruction of our systems, and no university, no human institution, can sit placidly, serenely smiling unless the serenity be the serenity of death. There must be changes; there must be growth, and we mean to aim high. There is no doubt that we are in the midst of events which must effect a movement of the centre of gravity of human affairs; how many degrees we cannot say, but it has moved. We cannot in Canada hope at present to rival in point of numbers and physical size our great southern neighbor, but we can and will, if we are true to ourselves, more than rival her in those things which are of first importance, the things of the intellect and spirit. In war these things have proved themselves justified, and in peace and in history they are the only things that open pathways for the ascent of man."

Shortly after this came the news that he would be unable to at once relinquish his position in the Cabinet and was immediately granted leave of absence from the University. This announcement gave birth to doubt which since that time has been steadily growing. The question was whether Sir Auckland would stand by his convictions as expressed in his opening remarks at the banquet and come here or yield to the persuasive influence of such men as Lloyd George and Bonar Law. Since then it has been evident that he has either changed his views or succumbed to their attack and the natural result is expressed in the cable received yesterday.

We can only hope that Sir Auckland Geddes may achieve as much fame and success as British Ambassador at Washington as he might have here, following what he once considered the Path of Duty.

NOTICES

Members of executives and others are requested to look under this heading for notices of all functions. Each notice is absolutely official. The Editor will not be responsible for errors in articles unless the time and date are written out in full when they are sent in.

OLD SCOUTS CLUB.

INSURE STUDENTS AGAINST FINES.

What is probably the most novel form of insurance in the world has been put into effect by the undergraduates of Emmanuel College, Cambridge University, England, who have formed a mutual benefit society to protect themselves against the fines of overzealous proctors.

The entrance fee to this insurance society is 1 shilling (24 cents) and the dues are 1 shilling a term. This insures the student against ordinary proctorial fines with a maximum of two fines per term and 13 shillings and fourpence ($3.30) per fine. Fines incurred on the 5th of November, Guy Fowkes Day, and the Armistice anniversary, however, are not paid for by the society.

For 2 shillings and 6 pence (60 cents) entrance fee and 1 shilling a term the undergrad can insure against the punishment of being "sent down." In this event the society will stand a dinner for four, pay a maximum of 3 pounds ($14.61) and buy a first class fare to the unfortunate's destination.

DEATH OF IRVING O. VINCENT, M.A.

By the death of Irving O. Vincent, M.A., on Monday, Feb. 23rd, of pneumonia, McGill University has lost one of her most promising graduates and the Province one of its most progressive and enthusiastic educationalists.

Mr. Vincent graduated in Arts with First Rank Honors in Classics in 1907, and took his M.A. degree the following year. In the short space of eleven years since he entered the teaching profession he not only won for himself a position of importance and responsibility as principal of a large city school, but also obtained a knowledge of educational conditions in the Province which was quite remarkable in so young a man. As a natural result of his work among the boys and girls of a crowded city district he became acquainted with the serious conditions prevailing in Montreal on account of the lack of compulsory school attendance and saw the urgent need for reform. He devoted himself heart and soul to the cause of the children of the Province, and, as Chairman of the Committee of the Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers, directed a systematic study of the whole question of school attendance, with two practical results: first, the publication of an exhaustive report, referred to by the official organ of the Department of Education of Toronto University as 'the best thing of its kind ever done'; and, secondly, the formation of a Federal Committee of prominent citizens to carry on the work of propaganda for a School Attendance Law. Only those who have been intimately associated with Mr. Vincent in this work know the enormous amount of research, compilation of statistics, and writing of newspaper articles that he personally undertook. Last summer he devoted himself to writing a history of the Compulsory Education Movement in Quebec from its inception many years ago; and at the time of his death, he was engaged on another very important piece of research work, dealing with the financial aspect of education in the Province.

Mr. Vincent's whole-hearted devotion to the interests of the children naturally brought him into close touch with various other organized efforts to improve conditions, especially that of the Anti-Child-Labor League, of which he was an active member. Mr. Vincent was also associated with the inauguration of "The Teachers' Magazine," the new official organ of the Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers, and was an Associate Editor. In his capacity of Vice-President of the Association, he was indefatigable in his efforts to raise the status of teachers, and took an active part in the various campaigns that have been, and are being, conducted to this end.

To all these multifarious investigations and activities, Mr. Vincent brought a sound classical and professional training, with a clear grasp of detail, a sureness of judgment and capacity for work, that make his loss incalculable; the more so that he was possessed also of certain less definable qualities which reformers so often lack; a quiet modesty of bearing and charm of manner, which played no small part in the success of his undertakings, and endeared him to all who had the privilege of working with him. And in the midst of the engrossing interests which have been outlined here, and the onerous duties of his professional life, Mr. Vincent still found time for study. He felt that there was great danger of allowing the intellectual side to be overshadowed; and so, from time to time, he returned to his student life, and spent part of several vacations, quite recently, in pursuing his classical studies at the University of Chicago.

It is impossible to realize yet what a loss the city and the Province have sustained; but if his conferees carry on and bring to a successful issue the various educational reforms which his personality and devotion inspired, his life will not have been lived in vain. The sincere sympathy of her fellow graduates is tendered to Mrs. Vincent, nee Theodora W. Brown, of Arts 1909.

ELECTRICIANS HELD MEETING

"Motors" Subject Of Address At Electrical Club.

The Electrical Club held a meeting in the Engineering Building yesterday afternoon at which a subject of considerable interest to Electrical Engineering students was dealt with. The speaker was Mr. Mills, of the Montreal Armature Works, who gave a talk on the design of induction motors as it is carried out in practice.

Mr. Mills introduced his subject with a few humorous reminiscences of his first experiences with some of the large electrical firms. He then went into some of the points to be considered in the design of motors for pulp grinders and gave some of the practical formula used for calculating the characteristics of these machines. He then went on to a general discussion of the application of induction motors to some of the more difficult load problems in the industrial world.

The United States are installing this type of motor in 25,000 H.P. units in their battleships and are thereby get-

To the Editor of McGill "Daily."

Dear Sir:

Will you allow me space in your valuable paper to deny the allegations made from certain obscure and unknown quarters that H. M. "Mock" parliament has attempted political persecution of one Hank Whiffletree of Sim's Corner.

This a libellous, fallacious and unfounded piece of mischief and fiction intended to injure the reputation of the members of H. M. Government, and Loyal Opposition before the voting public. I may say we have had the "Committee of Sixteen" investigate this matter, and they have found that Old Hank Whiffletree is the only one who lies at v'Ssim's Corner (which corner is just a right turn in his, the said Whiffletree's, old pole fence around his straw stack), and further that the alleged attempt upon him was but the formal breaking up of a caucus between him and his wife, who is an ardent Progressive, while their son Si is a Constitutional whip. Up till the time the press, all to eager to grasp at rumors, came out with an account of this supposed plot no trace can be found in any government papers or proceedings of any intimation of either Hank Whiffletree or Sim's Corner; let alone a well formulated plot represented by a bill for the purpose of destroying a movement from a farmers party declared to be much feared by both parties of H. M. loyal Parliament.

Further the House of Commons in session has put itself on record as being entirely, absolutely and unconditionally unalarmed by any threatened, backwoods, hayseed coup d'etat that may chance to be rumored from such quarters. The members are sure of the farmer's support, and will soon show its faith by a dissolution, and an appeal to the polls for a renewed mandate from the people.

I have the honor, Sir, to submit this refutation on behalf of H.M. "Mock" Parliament.

Yours truly,
MEMBER FOR BUMPKIN CENTER.
House of Commons,
Feb. 25, 1920.

To the Editor, McGill "Daily."

Dear Sir:—

The announcement made in your columns yesterday with regard to the approaching presentation of the Senior Play has aroused a great deal of interest in the minds of the lovers of the dramatic art at McGill. I am sure I am only voicing the sentiments of many of my fellow enthusiasts when I predict an unprecedented success on the part of the members of the company.

Unfortunately no mention was made of tickets of admission, an item of considerable importance in the minds of the prospective supporters of the enterprise. I would suggest that an announcement be made as soon as possible with regard to the price and manner of disposal of the tickets, so that everyone may have an equal opportunity of attending. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your kind indulgence.

I remain,

DRAMATIS.

To the Editor, McGill "Daily."

Dear Sir:—

Now that rumors are prevalent about the Alma Mater dance being held on March 19th, I would like to ask what method will be taken of selling tickets. In the past this dance has always been the chief dance of the year and it is only right that the members of the senior years should be given a preference when the tickets are being disposed of. Graduates have always taken the opportunity of making the Alma Mater dance a re-union dance and it might be well to give them every opportunity of obtaining tickets.

I have no reason for wishing to see the members of the first and second years excluded from a function that everyone in the college must wish to attend, but I do think that the members of the upper years should be given a chance of securing the tickets before they are put on sale to the college as a whole.

Yours truly,

SENIOR.

NOTICE.

In our issue we were the first to print a notification of the death of Mr. O'Rion. To-day we are the first to deny the report. The "Daily" is always in the lead.

The speaker concluded his address by giving ideas of the costs of materials used in electrical machinery and the relative importance of the different materials.

NEW RAILWAY ACROSS UNGAVA TERRITORY.

The railway acts recently passed by the Quebec Legislature authorize the construction of a main line of railway from east to west right across the almost unknown territory of Ungava. This will extend from the Bay of Seven Islands on the Gulf of St. Lawrence on the one side, to some suitable harbor on the east side of the Hudson Bay on the other. The railway will connect with lines extending from Quebec to Chicoutimi, and from Chicoutimi, circling round from the north side of Lake St. John to the Mistassini River, Lake Chibougamau and Great Lake Mistassini, and then again extending northwards to a point of junction with the main Ungava line a little to the south of Lake Nichiguan.

This development will open up an immense stretch of country known to be rich in minerals, with great water powers supplied by its many rivers, with almost limitless possibilities for pulp and paper in its stretches of primeval forest, and with sections of good agricultural land only requiring to be worked to become of value. With all these resources to draw upon, a manufacturing and farming district is certain to develop to the north of Lake St. John similar to the Lake St. John district in character, and only needing the transportation facilities which these railways will supply to become equally fertile and prosperous.

WOMAN ROUGES OWN PORTRAIT.

One of America's foremost portrait painters, who numbers among his clientele many women of wealth, is telling of a nouveau riche woman who sat for him recently. This woman, who is the wife of a prominent politician and business man, had decided that their home was not really up to date without a painting of herself.

In due time the painting was completed and accepted by the woman and her husband. They took it home and had it hung on the wall. But everything was not well. The woman decided that the artist should have put more color in her face and her lips. She told the butler to bring a stepladder, and climbing up she rouged the lips and cheeks of the painting with a lip stick and then sat down and surveyed her work.

The woman put in a long distance telephone call for the artist and told him she thought "she had done something that she shouldn't." The face had to be painted over.

THE ORPHEUM.

This week's show at the Orpheum Theatre is of their usual high standard. It consists of a musical comedy, "The Only Girl," in which the life of the poor, enslaved married man is depicted. Many very interesting situations are developed, especially where the wives suspect their husbands of keeping company with a bunch of show girls.

The story is of a writer of light opera, Alan Kinborough, "Kim," who together with his three pals, is a confirmed old bachelor. One by one, however, his pals desert the cause for "the only girl in the world." Kim is indignant, declaring that all the good times are at an end. He invites them to bring their wives to dinner in six weeks' time, when their honeymoons will be over. A very amusing episode takes place when the guests arrive. A quarrel ensues between the wives over a remark made about the hair of one of them, which is said to be dyed, and soon Kim is left to himself, more determined than ever to remain free. But this is not to be. In writing his latest opera, he has collaborated with a young girl composer, Ruth Wilson, first, however, agreeing to forget entirely all question of sex, acting merely as two machines. This situation, however, cannot last, and the play ends with Kim declaring to his three pals that he has found "the only girl," and is the happiest man in the world.

The acting of A. S. Byron, playing the part of one of the pals, Andrew MacMurray, a Scotsman, is especially fine, and keeps the audience in fits of laughter. The show girls, friends of Kim, supply some lively entertainment during the scenes, and are the cause of much trouble and dissension between the three pals and their keepers. The musical part contains some catchy songs, which prove very popular.

MED. SOCIETY ADDRESSED BY PROF. HICKSON

Paper On "Freudianism and Scientific Method"

ABLY DELIVERED.

Other Speakers Were Prof. Oertel, Prof. Lloyd and Dr. Russell.

With one of the most brilliant of addresses ever given to the Medical Undergraduate Society, Prof. Hickson last night made his first acquaintance with the Medical Student body at McGill.

The paper, which was entitled, "Freudianism and Scientific Method," did not, according to Professor Hickson, bring with it anything new on the subject, but was intended as an exposition and criticism of a tendency or movement started by Sigmund Freud, a pupil of Charcot, in 1896, and which had for its aim the analysis and explanation of the normal and abnormal in human behaviour. Psychoanalysis is a theory of motives which aims at the understanding of an individual's behaviour by resolving them into elements.

Freud laid great stress upon the unconscious factors in human behaviour, and spent great effort in roundabout explanation of instances of very usual mental processes — such as lapses of memory, etc. Thus, the omission of an individual to sign a cheque signified an unconscious unwillingness to sign the cheque. Such casual mistakes, according to Freud, are not accidental, but are concerned with some internal purpose which must be examined.

Thus Freud, in order to explain what are more generally regarded as mistakes of repetition and habit, resorts to many far-fetched interpretations, employing a whole series of figures to explain the phenomena. Everywhere in Freudianism we discern an eagerness to put all the facts under the cover of a certain doctrine, and at the same time many important facts are ignored in order that the hypothesis may be upheld.

Besides the weakness of method, we can find no display of the casual mechanism in these phenomena. The treatment of numbers and symbols to bring out sexual illusions is so formidable and bewildering as to make one gasp. They surpass Pythagoreanism and Oriental occultism in this respect. Many instances illustrating the ridiculousness of the theory were afforded by Prof. Hickson. "Thus a man who by taking poison by mistake, exhibits an unconscious desire to end his life, even if beforehand he may have stated clearly the reverse. Thus, we understand that the looking for unconscious motives in so many of these simple psychological phenomena is too remote and impossible for serious consideration."

Historically, the idea of an unconscious wish or desire or expression, is merely an offshoot of that metaphysical doctrine of the unconscious will, developed by Schopenhauer. Indeed, Freudianism everywhere reflects the influence of Schopenhauer's philosophy. He may be regarded as the forerunner of Bergson, and shares with the latter and with Einstein the privilege of being the centre of philosophic discussion during the past decade.

However, this may be said of Freud, that his attitude towards his patients was much more humanistic than that of Charcot, who regarded his patients as objects rather than persons. These patients, Freud believed were suffering from displacement of their mental centre of gravity. He recognized and admitted the limited value of his work in therapeutics, emphasizing always the necessity of a complete confidence between the patient and the physician.

Outside of his unscientific method of over-generalization of a theory, Freud has contributed something of value to suggestive therapeutics. Much activity, he believed, underlies the surface of consciousness, and these processes of the unconscious mind are of greater importance than those of the conscious. Here we see a desire on the part of Freud to found a theory on the unknown. He wished to bring psychology into relations with physics — a perfectly laudable desire, but also to show a conservation and transformation of energy in the mental world which, if true, would mean that no mental state would ever be lost.

Few fundamental impulses are so repressed as those of sex, and it is of importance to the physician to realize this fact. Many of the cases of hysteria and other mental aberration may be instances of the release of the voluntary censorship. Proceeding further, however, Freud maintains that in these cases something has become displaced in the individual that must come to the surface. Psychoanalysis will thus furnish the means of bringing it to the surface and freeing the mind of its disturbance.

Concerning mental diseases, Prof. Hickson declared that probably very few chronic asylum cases exhibit any autopsy any anatomical changes. Such changes, if there be any, are certainly not observable. Hence our present knowledge of Anatomy, Physiology and Pathology, being insufficient to shed

Any light on these fundamental neurones, shall in no wise prevent psycho-therapy from proceeding with its methods.

Very contrasting to Freudianism has proved the condition known as "shell-shock." Here, obviously, the factor lies not in sexual impulses but in the instinct of self-preservation.

In concluding his paper, Prof. Hickson explained that Freud's theory is too far-fetched to truly explain phenomena which are really mechanical. Desires are not all in our mental life. Volition, feeling, reason, play roles fully as great. The extravagant claims of Freudianism are hence without adequate basis. Many motives in our mental life are not sexual. Many symptoms of disease are pathological because they can have no meaning. Here we have a development of that teleological explanation of things which has been slowly eliminated in the fields of philosophy, chemistry, biology and all other sciences.

However, innovators like Freud often accomplish good by their one-sidedness; certainly, we may rest assured that no system of ethics which is not founded on Physiology will ever be scientific. Suppression of certain states very often involves pathological conditions, but what Freudianism ignores is the need to harmonize and co-ordinate our organism effectively.

After this extremely interesting paper, a vote of thanks was extended to Prof. Hickson on behalf of the society. The chairman called upon Professor Oertel and Professor Lloyd and Dr. Russell for a few words.

Prof. Oertel recognized the value and significance of Dr. Hickson's address, and the fact that the speaker had not ignored the nucleus of truth in Freudianism, which subsequently became exaggerated by the followers of Freud. Prof. Oertel vehemently opposed teleological conceptions in scientific investigations, asserting that we wrongly read a purpose in such phenomena because of our narrow individual standpoint. Objective investigation is necessary and not a narrow personal standpoint which we tend to read into phenomena.

Dr. Russell regretted that Freudianism had recently ceased to be only a tendency but was becoming rapidly a movement. He complimented Prof. Hickson upon his healthy minded criticism of this movement, recognizing at least the humanitarian attitude taken by Freudians towards their patients. Much of this Freudianism had been fostered he believed through the incapacity of physicians to help such patients. Dr. Russell disagreed with Prof. Oertel in maintaining that wishes and desires are, in us, very strong factors in causing disability. Through Psychology alone can we endeavor to explain these phenomena. Dr. Russell ended his remarks by stating that he was very sceptical of the subconscious mind and all its phenomena.

Such discussion met apparently great appreciation on the part of the society. The remaining moments were expended in the more or less dignified consumption of apples to the playing of the piano.

LOEW'S.

The show this week is very good. The show opened with the Gaumont Pictorial News, which showed some interesting pictures. The comedy, featuring Ford Sterling, followed. The ladies' tailor had a disagreement with his mother-in-law, who got him out of a tight place, and they made up finally. It contained the usual rough house and dare-devil acts.

There were five acts of vaudeville of very good order. The first was acrobatic. A man and woman performed daring and thrilling acts on two swinging prapazes. Their work was quick and their stunts varied, showing great strength and skill. The next act was performed by negro comedians. Their singing, dancing and jokes were good, and they gave a good performance with the bones. The third act was a short play of fair quality. This act was followed by a comic one. The comedian kept the people amused by telling about his misfortune with his Ford, and described his family and relations, and how he got rid of his relations by means of his Ford. The last act was musical. A variety of instruments were played, and the actor put in some very humorous actions.

The play, featuring Constance Talmadge, is good. Lillian Blair has been a chorus girl and has signed a contract for a principal part by means of the money of an admirer. The manager and admirer wish to celebrate. En route they get rather rowdy, and, taking fear, Lillian escapes in a van, and finally lands in a house owned by three bachelors. Two of them are quite pleased at her appearance, but the third is reluctant to let her stay until the tipsy admirer comes for her, and he informs him that Lillian is going to stay for a two weeks' visit. The admirer promises to return in two weeks, and departs. Then follows many funny scenes when Lillian falls in love with the youngest man, who is so unmoved by women, and she does her best to lure him on, but of no avail. At length the two weeks pass and the admirer returns. She says that she doesn't want the stage for a career but a home. He proposes, and she tells him to go outside and wait. This, of course, all goes on within hearing of the once immovable young man, who in the last minute proposes, and she accepts. They sneak off in his automobile, and leave the rich and mean lover with a note of refusal.

That the Happy Jazz Band may produce a lot of wind, but there is very little air to it.

LAW FACULTY HELD BANQUET LAST EVENING

Nearly One Hundred Present At the Dinner.

GREAT SUCCESS.

Many Hearty and Appropriate Toasts the Feature of the Evening.

The Law Undergraduates' banquet, which took place last night at the St. Lawrence Hall, proved one of the most successful ever held by that faculty. Nearly one hundred were present, including the guests of the society. This was the first banquet that the Law Faculty have held since 1915, which tended to add to the enthusiasm of those who attended.

That the committee in charge had spared neither trouble nor expense was apparent.

The guests included Senator Foster, Batonnier of the Bar of the Province of Quebec, as guest of honor; Acting-Principal Dr. Frank Adams, Dean Lee, of the Law Faculty; Judges Green-shields, Surveyor, Howard and Lafontaine, the Dean of the Faculty of Law of the University of Montreal, Judge Mignault, and Messrs. Chipman, Rowat, McEwen, Beulac, Lafleur and Smith, members of the professoriate of the Faculty; Mr. Lafleur, president of the Law Faculty of the University of Montreal; and Mr. Caron, president of the Law Faculty of Laval University, Quebec.

The toast to the King was proposed by Mr. J. Veranille, president of the Law Undergraduates' Society.

The Silent Toast was proposed by Mr. Penverne.

Mr. Anglin proposed the toast to "Our Guest." In replying, the Hon. G. G. Foster, the guest of honor, said that through him the Hon. Mr. Doherty sent his regrets for not being in a position to attend the banquet. He stated that as Batonnier of the Bar of the Province of Quebec, he wished to say that the Quebec Bar considered it an honor to be able to show their appreciation to the returned men by doing what was in its power to smooth the way of returned Law students. It was his opinion that the man who entered Law to-day had many opportunities open to him that had not been open to those who had gone before. The profession of Law was a profession second to none, and the man who entered that profession need never envy the members of any other.

He recalled the day when Sir John A. Macdonald had marshalled his forces in that very room before leading them to victory. Other great leaders in the political field had also made that banquet hall the meeting places of their forces, so that the very room should hold encouraging traditions for those who were assembled there. The undergraduates present would one day become members of a profession that had written its name large in the making of Canada. This profession was second to none, and as members they must play the game to the limit.

The toast to Our Alma Mater was proposed by Mr. A. Grigg. In responding, Dean Adams grew reminiscent and looked back to the time when he was a student at Old McGill. In those days the Faculty of Law was in its infancy. Its first quarters were in the downtown district, later they were moved to a room over the Molsons Bank. The present McGill grounds were ploughed fields, and a ladies' school occupied the site of Strathcona Hall. Speaking of the present day University, he said that one of its most important missions was to foster a friendly feeling through its students between Canada and the United States.

In responding to the toast to The Faculty, proposed by Mr. D. I. Sherman, Dean Lee said: "We have every reason to congratulate ourselves on the present standing and future prospects of the Faculty of Law. The statistics show a student body numbering one hundred and twenty-five. This is more than twice the average of the past fifty years. First year, formerly averaging 20 to 25, now numbers 80 to 90. This is due to exceptional causes, especially the return of overseas men whose courses have been delayed by the war. This year, the Faculty has student representatives from every province in the Dominion, and boasts the finest teaching staff on the continent."

The Hon. Mr. Justice Green-shields, in replying to the toast to the Bar, declared that there is no member of society whom the Bench should acclaim than the Law student. When they have been admitted to the Bar, they will aid the Bench in solving questions of law that use day by day. No members of society are more interesting to the Bench than the Law students, of whom it proudly boasts.

In concluding, His Lordship said: "The Bench may be critical, but give it your best, be honest, be truthful in your statements of fact, and if you are so, you will never receive anything but fair treatment from the Bench. The Bench aids and encourages in every way the young lawyer who appears before it."

The other speakers of the evening were Mr. Kearney, who proposed the toast to the Bar, and Mr. G. W. Mac-
